

Acquisition and care of manuscripts and archives

- The proposed purchase must have good historical content and be relevant to the existing collections of the applicant. The Fund will not support the purchase of items bought for the autograph value alone.
- The applicant organisation should be the most appropriate place in the general national interest for the item in question.
- Applicants should meet the general requirements expected from an eligible institution (see Information for Applicants: eligibility criteria). In addition:
  - Record repositories and libraries are expected to be accredited under the Archive Service Accreditation Scheme, or working towards it.
  - Museums seeking to acquire manuscripts and archives are expected to follow the Code of Practice for Museums in the United Kingdom, issued by the Standing Conference on Archives and Museums, 1996.
- Applicants must be able to provide a high standard of care and should have:
- Facilities for the storage of documents in secure and climatically stable conditions in accordance with the guidelines set out in PD5454:2012 Guidance for the storage and exhibition of archival materials. It is expected, for example, that documents would be systematically stored in strong room security and not subjected to significant fluctuations in temperature and relative humidity. Removal of documents from controlled conditions should only take place for bona fide research and temporary display purposes.
- Provision for public access to the collections through adequate recording and cataloguing. There should be a designated, supervised study area for examination of original material adjacent to the storage area.
- Temporary display facilities which can provide physical and environmental security in accordance with the PD5454:2012. Display damages documents and the Purchase Grant Fund discourages their acquisition mainly for exhibition purposes.
- Suitably qualified staff. Where no qualified archivist, librarian or curator is employed, the Fund would expect the institution to make direct use of the advice of an approved record office or The National Archives in all matters concerning the care of archival material.

These criteria are intended as guidelines and Purchase Grant Fund staff are prepared to discuss individual points with prospective applicants.
